

YoungStar Day Camp Enrollment Inventory

7.3.2015

The YoungStar Day Camp Enrollment Inventory is a collection of questions a day camp program can use to help initially document children's growth and development as they begin participation in the program. It is an optional tool geared toward programs that serve school-age children. Providers should not use this inventory for children under 5. For children under the age of 5, a developmentally appropriate assessment tool should be used to determine the child's present level of the child's growth and development. For children age 5 – 7, it is recommended that the staff ask the children the questions and record their responses.

During their day camp (out-of-school) hours, children work on a variety of developmental tasks every day as they move towards independence. Collecting valuable information when a school-age child is enrolled in a program by using inventories can help construct a developmental profile for each child. The questions for the child (in Part 1: Child Inventory on page 2) should be asked by the staff for the younger children and the older children can answer the inventory questions on their own.

The purpose of using an inventory:

- Staff can become aware of the needs, interests, talents, abilities, and skills of individual children. They use this knowledge and insight to plan and adjust program activities, experiences, and environments.
- Staff can become focused on involving children in program planning and implementation.
- Staff can become committed to working with parents, children, and colleagues as partners who further each child's growth and development.
- Staff can become interested in finding creative ways to extend and enhance opportunities for children to build on their unique interests, talents, and skills.

The inventory for families (Part 2: Family Inventory on page 4) asks families questions about their child. This allows day camp programs and programs serving school-age children to identify meaningful, efficient, and engaging ways to share important information with families. An inventory tool is a way to bring children's experiences in programs serving school-age children to life for families. It can help parents recognize the important ways programs serving school-age children support the children's development.

INTERESTS and FAVORITE ACTIVITIES

Active play options help children develop physically and help them learn to devise and follow rules. Expressive art, storytelling, and music help develop imagination. Crafts and constructive play help children develop small motor coordination and develop a sense of competence as they learn new skills. Dramatic play give children a chance to practice roles, examine feelings and sometimes get a better understanding of a sometimes confusing adult world. Strategy games and puzzles challenge a child’s emerging logical and symbolic faculties. Science experiments, discovery play appeal to a child’s curiosity about the world and encourage them to ask questions and look for their own answers.

In order to best serve your child and meet their individual needs. Is your child receiving any special services at school or in the community that we need/should be aware of?

If you'd like to talk to staff about your child, please feel free to stop in or call to arrange a time when we can have a conference. Please remember, we are happy to talk to you any time during the year when you have a question or concern. We do not schedule parent/guardian conferences at a set time during the program due to the many demands on your time as a working parent/guardian with a child involved in school, the day camp program or other activities. It is extremely important, however, that we keep in close communication with each other.
